Flying for Summer Resorts

BY MARGARET WADE.

THE President's trip to Annapolis, aboard the Mayflower for the graduation exercises, established a new record for travel between Washington and the Maryland capital. The round trip, usually covered by a White House automobile in two hours, or by a humble trolley car in twice that time, when made by way of the Potomac, Chesapeake Bay, and the Severn, can be lengthened to forty-eight hours aloft and afford a much-needed rest under the most delightful conditions.

Mrs. Wilson did not accompany the President, his party being a purely masculine one, including the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels; the secretary to the President, Mr. Tumulty; Lieut. Commander Needham Jones, and Dr. Cary Grayson. The great success of this short trip, which began Thursday evening, is likely to lead to its frequent repetition throughout the summer.

While the Mayflower, officially designated as the President's yacht, was in constant requisition by the former chief executives or their families, Mrs. Wilson and her daughters have shown slight inclination to take advantage of this adjunct to the White House, either for health or pleasure.

Mrs. Wilson is especially fond of motoring, and under some conditions may decide to make her forthcoming journey from Washington to Cornish in this comfortable fashion, and by easy stages. No time has been set for the northward flight of the mistress of the White House, who finds her large southwest room overlooking the White Lot all the way to the Potomac quite comfortable, even with the mercury in the 90's.

"Harlakenden House" having been opened for the honeymoon visit of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo, can be put in complete readiness for the arrival of Mrs. Wilson at an hour's notice.

The Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, except for short trips such as they propose making in the present week when the Vice President will address several educational bodies in New England, are planning a summer in Washington. Which may be taken to mean the Vice President has no hope of an early adjournment of Congress.

The plans of the different Cabinet hostesses are all tentative and conditional, with the possible exception of those of Mrs. Houston. This young matron has taken a cottage at Woods Hole, where, by reason of the health of her children, she will take up her residence in the coming week.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo also have a summer home in readiness for them on the Massachusetts coast, but for the immediate future will be at their Washington home, and very naturally will be the most entertained, as well as most interesting, couple of the entire Cabinet circle. The large garden party at "Calumet Place" yesterday afternoon served as a delightful initiation of the many hospitalities planned for the Cabinet bride, and the youngest official hostess of many administrations.

Except the Mexican Embassy, which is marked "absent" in the official record of the State Department, and the Austro-Hungarian Embassy, which transferred itself to Manchester-by-the-Sea during the past week, the representatives of all the great powers, European and Oriental, are still maintaining their official residences in Washington.

The dean of the corps and Mme. Jussard have put their embassy into summer attire with cool-looking covers on the furniture, and the lightest of draperies to the real French windows, from which they can overlook half of Washington, and have an uninterrupted view of the river. They expect, however, to make their usual visit to France before midsummer.

The Russian Ambassador and Mme. Bakmeteff, and the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. Riano, who have selected Newport for their summer homes, will probably leave Washington during the present week.

The Supreme Court is still sitting, thus keeping in Washington a small but very important group of official hostesses who usually leave the Capital early in the summer. Chief Justice and Mrs. White have a cottage at the White Sulphur Springs, at "The White," as all real Virginians call this famous old watering place, but when asked when they expect to go there Mrs. White, who is almost as wise as her distinguished husband, simply replies that she does not know. Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. Pitney, having permanent summer homes and children home from school, may desert the heads of their respective families when the weather becomes too hot for further endurance, but as a rule the households of the judiciary, like those of the Cabinet, will remain open for some weeks longer.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan yesterday afternoon inaugurated the short series of brilliant entertainments planned in honor of the home-coming of the Secretary of the Treasury and his bride.

That the bride is the daughter of the President and the wedding just a month in the past made the occasion all the more interesting. There were few regrets to the eight hundred and fifty guests to a garden party that in point of attraction and interest has been equaled only at the White House of the extensive garden of Calumet Place was for the afternoon screened by canvas, over which grew rambling roses and honeysuckle, while as a special background for the hosts and the guests of honor was arranged a large screen of crimson roses and white lilies.

The seclusion of this outdoor reception room was heightened by a giant box tree which cut off the view of the approaching guests until almost in the presence of the hosts. Here for nearly three hours Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo received the good wishes of hundreds of friends. The Secretary of State received with him Mr. Robert Zimmerman, Jr., of Alexandria, took place last evening at the home of the bride with only a small family party to witness the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Judge Atkinson, of the Court of Claims, and former governor of West Virginia. Rev. George W. Atkinson, Jr., cousin of the bride, officiated, while young Mrs. Atkinson served as matron of honor. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Lindsay, of this city, with Mrs. Ross P. Elliott as best man.

A reception, to which a number of additional guests were asked, followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman left last evening for their future home in Williamsburg, Ky., where the bridegroom is now engaged in business.

She was escorted by her cousin, Dr. Emory W. Reisinger, of this city. The bridegroom was his best man, Dr. William Otis Bailey, U. S. A. Both these officers wore full uniform.

The bride's gown was a white satin, with which she wore a tulle veil held by tiny clusters of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley.
